The Houston Artist Commissioning Project

Submissions due by midnight on June 12, 2022

Premiere Performances: February 24 & 25, 2023 | Cullen Theater, Wortham Center

Frequently Asked Questions

When will awards be announced?

Three to four awardees will be announced publicly at the start of the 22/23 season.

How are commission awardees identified?

Applications to the commissioning project are evaluated by a panel of judges including local artists who were selected as winners in the previous commissioning cohort and members of Performing Arts Houston staff & Board of Directors. All applications will receive feedback from the judging panel. Judges will evaluate work using a rubric that considers genre diversity, artistic merit, and the demonstration of the capacity of each applicant to realize a live presentation.

Is there a focus or theme for this commissioning project?

Performing Arts Houston welcomes project proposals in all performing arts disciplines and across genres or content areas. Submissions will be considered based on their alignment with our values of Excellence, Artistic Expression, Equity & Inclusion, Community, Exploration, and Celebration (as outlined in our Strategic Plan).

Houston is the most culturally diverse city in the nation. In celebrating artists' voices here at home, we promote more connected and thriving communities. Performing Arts Houston believes Black artists, Indigenous artists, artists of color, artists in the LGBTQ+ community, artists with disabilities, and woman artists must be centered through this project. To that end, we strongly encourage applications from artists with these identities or members of other marginalized communities.

What is included in the award amount?

Each awardee will receive $6,000 all-inclusive fee to support the creation of a new, 20-25 minute work. The $6,000 fee is accompanied by full presentation in the Cullen Theater and marketing expenses to include this new work as part of Performing Arts Houston's 2022-2023 season. The awardees will receive an additional $1000 toward the creation of marketing assets.

The Houston Artist Commissioning Project

Awardees will be asked to participate in a teaser video to promote the premiere performance—this may include being available to shoot rehearsal footage or interview segments leading up to the performance.

Awardees will receive professional photography and videography of their premiere performances, to be used at their discretion, accompanied by a credit line to Performing Arts Houston.

Each commissioning cohort will receive dedicated space on our website to recognize their participation in the project, in perpetuity. Awardees will have future opportunities to collaborate with Performing Arts Houston on extended programs and receive counsel from staff on general arts administrative concerns.

How does the commission work?

Commission awardees will create an original 20-25 minute work, to premiere in the Cullen Theater, on February 24 & 25, 2023. In addition to the premiere, awardees will participate in:

- One pre-performance virtual conversation with Performing Arts Houston staff
- One post-performance panel discussion from the stage of the Cullen Theater
- One Education program through Performing Arts Houston involvement in local schools and community organizations.

Student-friendly performances may also be selected to participate in an open rehearsal for local area students, during the day on Thursday, February 23, 2023.

Important Note: Performing Arts Houston does not have rehearsal space to offer (we wish we did)

What is expected of commission awardees?

Awardees will be expected to set aside time to complete a walk-through of the theater six months in advance of the premiere. Clear deadlines to submit production information will be provided by Performing Arts Houston, in addition to logistical details and a technical schedule of events that all participants of the performance must attend, to ensure the highest quality production. Performing Arts Houston has limited flexibility in the space and awardees may not reschedule technical tours or rehearsal times.

Awardees will be expected to attend a number of in-person cohort meetings, including but not limited to an opening celebration, post-performance Cast Party, and closing de-brief session.

Can an artist be awarded a commission two years in a row?

Artists who were awarded commissions in the prior year will not be eligible to receive a commission in the subsequent season. After one year out of the awardee cycle, previous winners will again be considered for awards.
